

21st International Project Week 2019
20th – 24th May 2019

Lecturer: Connie Gunderson

University/Company: The College of St. Scholastica

Country: USA

Transforming Community: The Radical Reality of Relationship

Content:

This course introduces students to Relational-Cultural theory (RCT) and its application to health care, education, social justice and the environment. Relational-Cultural theory is an evidence based approach to psychology and social work. It has been recognized by the American Psychological Association as one of the top ten theories of our time. RCT acknowledges the centrality of relational development throughout the lifespan, the neuroscience of connection and the importance of addressing social justice issues within our local, regional and international communities.

Methods:

Workshops to include interactive activities

Competences and skills to be acquired:

Integration of internationally relevant theory to intercultural practice in the fields of social work, psychology and education.

Prerequisites:

None

Language of instruction:

English

Recommended for:

Sozialwissenschaften